

O Jesus, guide our footsteps lest we stray. For straying, My children there is no cure except to keep so close to Me that nothing, no interest, no temptation, no other -- can come between us.

Sure of that you can but stay at My Side, knowing that, as I am the very Way itself, nothing can prevent you being in the Way, nothing can cause you to stray.

I have promised Peace but not leisure, heartrest and comfort, but not pleasure, I have said "In the world ye shall have tribulation"; so do not feel, when adverse things happen, that you have failed or are not being guided, but I have said "In the world ye shall have tribulation but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

So learn of Me the overcoming Power of one who, though spat upon, scourged, misunderstood, forsaken, crucified, could yet see His Work had not been affected by these things, and cry triumphantly from His Cross "It is finished."

Not the pain, the mocking, the agony, but His Task.

Let this thought comfort you. Amid failure, discord, contumely, suffering, even now may friends and angels be prepared to sound the chorus "It is finished."

This passage from God Calling, written by "two listeners" and edited by A. J. Russell, was submitted to us by Br. Leslie Victor, BSG. Br. Leslie Victor serves with the Superior at St. Bartholomew's Church, White Plains.

He is a member of the choir and is bass soloist. He also serves as Lector and Crucifer at many services through out the year, and assists on the Worship and Fine Arts and the Bazaar Commissions.

JESUS CHRIST -- SERVANT - LORD

With the Brotherhood's General Chapter approaching, this column is devoted to some of the qualities of Jesus which we try to emulate as Servants of the Servants of God.

We perceive by faith, faith tested and being tested, by scripture, tradition, reason and experience, that Jesus Christ is Servant-Lord. He is God with us in the realities of our common life. Within these realities he claims authority over our corporate and personal thoughts, words, deeds and relationships, but does not force our obedience. He challenges us to choose from between his Servant-Lordship and the lesser lords who seek to manipulate and control us.

1. He is Servant-Lord of all creation. The whole created order is sacramental because it is permeated - perhaps almost saturated - with his efforts to provide an adequate life-sustaining context for communities and persons who are traveling by his gracious favor from sin to salvation. Through the whole creation are traces of the Servant-Lord at work on our behalf.

2. He is Servant-Lord of nations. The great commission in Matthew 28:18-19 deserves more careful exegesis than it usually gets. In it the Risen Lord said "all authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Go therefore, and make disciples of all nations." The word for 'nations' in the Greek text means literally 'multitudes associated or living together; a company; a troupe.' We see, therefore, that Christ is Servant-Lord of nations, communities, groups and that he expects to be recognized as One who creates, re-orders and sustains Kingdom-directed social and systemic values.

3. He is Servant-Lord of persons. In John 20 there is the record of Thomas and his doubting, but also of Thomas and his confessing. When the disciple recognized Christ, risen and present, he exclaimed, "My Lord and my God!" We see that individuals, as well as nations may come consciously under the Servant-Lord and there find new status. We believe we participate in this everywhere that we work. This is what it means to be a Servant of the Servants of God -- not the subscription to a creed, but the loving attachment to a person -- a Servant-Lord: Jesus Christ.

RAPTURE

As the priest raised the Host over his head
and the thurifer swung his smoke,
it was as if all Heaven was rejoicing.
"If I be lifted up, I will draw all men to me. "

As the priest raised the Host,
one could almost hear all nine choirs of angels
beautifully sing "Holy, Holy, Holy Lord, God of hosts."

As the priest raised the Host,
I could see all the Saints
prostrate in adoration;
I could see the seraphim and cherubim
standing at the altar of incense;
standing before the Lamb.

As the priest raised the Host,
and through the smoke the radiance shines through,
through the lives of all believers;

As the priest raised the Host,
it forces us to recall the raising of the Tree,

As the priest raised the Host,
I could see the agony He endured,
endured for all. I could hear His plea,
"Father, forgive them."

As the priest raised the Host,
I could here Him say,
"Into Your hands I commend My spirit."

As the priest raised the Host,
I could see the angels and holy spirits weeping.
Oh God, such weeping.

As the priest raised the Host,
I could see the empty tomb,
the tomb where once lay a dead Jesus.

As the priest raised the Host over his head,
I could see the living Christ.
